

On the genericity theorem

ANGELO VISTOLI

Symposium, Basel, December 17, 2009

The genericity theorem says that, with appropriate hypotheses, the essential dimension of a functor equals the maximal dimension of an object with generic moduli. I will discuss results in this direction, both known and conjectural. In particular I will concentrate on applications to the determination of the essential dimension of a singular curve.